Dear Mr. Johnson:

On behalf of the Ontario Parent Council, I am pleased to submit the Council’s Annual Report for the period of July 1, 1996 to June 30, 1997.

Pursuing its mandate to advise from a parental perspective on elementary and secondary education, and seeking to promote parental involvement in education, the Council was active on several fronts during the year.

Developments of particular note were the release of the first elements of a new curriculum for Grades 1 to 8, the development of a provincial report card, the first tests by the Education Quality and Accountability Office (EQAO), and the establishment of the Ontario College of Teachers (OCT). Officials from the Ministry of Education and Training, the EQAO and the OCT communicated and consulted with the Ontario Parent Council at many stages as these initiatives took shape. Their willingness to do so greatly assisted the Council in its advisory duties, and is gratefully acknowledged by its members.

The Ontario Parent Council notes with satisfaction that school councils throughout the province continue to grow in number and in their range of activities. The Council commends parents and other members of the school community who are contributing their time and energy to their school councils, and continues to support steps that will make school councils a more effective vehicle for parental involvement in education.

This report provides details about many of the activities of the Ontario Parent Council during the year. Many thanks are due to my colleagues on the Council and to the Council’s staff for the dedication, enthusiasm, and professionalism that made these activities possible.

Sincerely,

William B. P. Robson
Immediate Past Chair
Ontario Parent Council

With significant reforms in the education system initiated in 1996-97, the Ontario Parent Council was very active in providing the Minister of Education and Training with advice on matters of concern to Ontario parents.

The Council began its 1996-97 term with a full complement of 18 members under its new Chair, William Robson. During the term, the Council met twice with the Minister of Education and Training, and also met with his Parliamentary Assistants on Education and with senior officials and staff in the Ministry to discuss education reform initiatives.

Between July 1, 1996 and June 30, 1997, the Council held six general meetings during which the Council considered and formulated positions on major policy issues, either referred by the Minister or identified by the Council as being significant. As the government proceeded with a rapid series of education reform initiatives, members were actively involved in consultations on many topics, including curriculum, assessment, reporting, funding and secondary school restructuring. The Council provided the Minister with written advice and recommendations on these and many other subjects.

Council members also met, either collectively or individually, with parent groups, educators and other groups and organizations. The Council tried, within a restricted time frame, to accommodate the many groups that asked to make a presentation before the Council.

Highlights

The Council prepared a formal response to the Secondary School Reform consultation in November 1996, and presented a Brief to the Social Development Committee of the Legislature on Bill 104, the Fewer Boards Act, on March 17, 1997. A great deal of time and energy was devoted to the development of school councils, and after distributing a survey in February 1997 regarding school councils to all schools in Ontario, the Council received a response rate of 32%. The results of the survey were analyzed and a report was produced entitled Summary of School Council Survey. Details regarding these particular initiatives are provided in the “Activities” section of this report and copies of these documents are available from our office.
Communications

In order to provide the Minister with well-informed advice from a broad perspective, Council members consulted widely through the education community, sharing information with parents, teachers and other stakeholders, and listening to their concerns. The Council met with the Education Quality and Accountability Office, the Ontario College of Teachers, the Education Improvement Commission and the Ontario Secondary School Teachers’ Federation.

Thanks to many volunteer hours on the part of its members, the Council was able to accept most invitations during the 1996-97 term and the members met with over 100 parent councils, parent groups, educators and community organizations. Among other activities, members made presentations and gave workshops at the general meeting of the Ontario Public School Boards Association, at the Conference on Assessment and Reporting Achievement, at an information session with the Toronto Board of Trade, at the York University Science Fair and at the North York Parent Assembly.

In a year of rapid change, there were many requests for interviews from the news media. Most of this responsibility was borne by the Chair William Robson, but many other members found themselves called upon to participate in press interviews, radio phone-ins and television debates. The Chair of the Council and members were interviewed by the Globe and Mail, the Toronto Star, the Toronto Sun, Le Droit, the Ottawa Citizen, the Ottawa Sun and other local press, Radio Canada, CBC radio and television in Toronto and Ottawa, TV Ontario and radio and television across Ontario. The Council issued a number of news releases related to school councils, secondary school reform and Bill 104.

Unable to produce a newsletter for parents during the 1996-97 school year due to budgetary cuts, the Council prepared a pamphlet and other information material in English and French. Intended mainly for distribution at meetings and conferences, they briefly outline the purpose of the Council and ways to get in touch, including the toll-free telephone number and e-mail address. The Council was pleased to be given a sub-page on the Ministry’s website: http://www.edu.gov.on.ca/eng/general/abcs/parentco for posting items such as news releases, annual reports and other relevant material. Hopes remain high for an interactive website in the near future.
Policy Issues

With the significant changes affecting education that were either proposed or actually implemented during the 1996-97 school year, the Ontario Parent Council was active in providing advice on a wide range of key education policy matters.

Key initiatives of the Council in this area were:

• a Brief to the Standing Committee on Social Development that examined Bill 104 (summarized below);

• a response to the request for public input to guide the government in its secondary school reform (summarized below);

• a presentation to the Education Improvement Commission which provided recommendations on the length of school days and the school year, professional development, differentiated staffing, teacher education and class sizes;

• participation in the development of the grades 1 to 8 curriculum in Language and Mathematics.

Many of the recommendations of the Council have found their way into subsequent legislation or documents, as policy planners and decision-makers have sought to include a parent’s perspective in the policies governing Ontario’s education.

Brief to the Standing Committee Reviewing Bill 104

In January 1997, the Government introduced Bill 104, an Act to Improve the Accountability, Effectiveness and Quality of Ontario’s School System (Fewer Boards Act). On March 27th, the Ontario Parent Council (OPC) presented a brief to the Standing Committee on Social Development reviewing the Bill.

The OPC summarized its position by stating that Bill 104 had the potential to bring about an improved system of education for Ontario students but that the emphasis had to be on the classroom and on providing schools with the resources and flexibility they needed to meet high standards and to respond to local conditions. In particular, the OPC supported the intent of the Bill regarding fewer school boards and fewer trustees, the strengthening of the financial accountability of boards, the freeing up of resources for the classroom, and the establishment of the Education Improvement Commission.

However, it was felt that Bill 104 needed strengthening in the area of local participation in decision making. There had to be a clearly defined place for parents and for school councils which would be key to the success of this new system. The OPC strongly urged the Committee that the establishment of school councils in Ontario’s schools be mandated in Bill 104.
In addition, the OPC stressed that parents had to be heard when recommendations were being developed during the transition process through representation on the Education Improvement Commission and on the committees that it may establish.

Summary of the Response by the Ontario Parent Council to the Secondary School Reform Consultation Guide

In its response to the Secondary School Reform Consultation Guide, the Ontario Parent Council included the following recommendations:

• the reintroduction of credits for Grades 9s;
• the reintroduction of streaming for Grades 9s, but on a subject-by-subject basis rather than streaming the whole child;
• streaming according to level of difficulty in Grades 9 and 10;
• streaming according to post-secondary destination in Grades 11 and 12;
• opportunities for remediation such as summer school, beginning at least in the transition years if not sooner;
• retention of current 110-hour course length;
• requirement of 20 compulsory credits and 10 optional credits for diploma;
• optional co-operation education/work experience for credit;
• use of professional development days for students as well as teachers.

School Councils

The Ontario Parent Council took on the task of researching the role of school councils and forwarded a position paper to the Minister.

Summary of the School Council Position Paper

In 1994, the Ontario Parent Council called for the legislation of school councils in every school in Ontario. In 1995, Policy and Program Memorandum 122 (PPM 122) was issued by the Government, directing school boards to have their school councils in place by June 1996. The Council felt that experience since PPM 122, and the anticipated changes forthcoming in education governance, called for a review of the structure and role of school councils. Therefore, the Council recommended that legislation be enacted to:

• mandate the existence of a school council in every school, and District Councils at the District Board level;
• give direction to principals and boards that they must seek and incorporate input from school and district councils in regard to specific areas;
stipulate the allocation of District Board funds and other resources to their school councils;

stipulate the term structure of, and eligibility for office on, school councils;

outline regular reporting and accountability structures.

That regulations accompany the above legislation to stipulate:

• procedural details;

• the role and responsibilities of the principal, council members and the District Board in relation to school councils;

• evaluation and reporting procedures.

That a dispute resolution mechanism, which includes an independent arbitrator or ombudsman, be established at the Ministry level.

School Council Survey
Following the preparation of this document, it was apparent to the Council as a whole that there was a need to intensify its efforts to communicate with local school councils. Therefore the members developed a questionnaire and forwarded it to all school council chairs, with three main objectives:

• to assess the success of the school council initiative thus far;

• to determine the ongoing support needs of school councils;

• to develop a registry of school councils which would enable the Ontario Parent Council to network and communicate effectively with them.

Over 1800 schools responded (32%) with detailed information about their various needs, concerns and opinions. The Ontario Parent Council hired a consulting company to analyse the large amount of data. A final report on school councils was prepared and made available to the public. It has provided the Council with a great deal of insight into the needs of school councils, and recommendations from this report were developed and forwarded to the Minister of Education and Training.

The Summary of the School Council Survey is available from our Web page which can be located at:
