This document contains materials designed for courses in Classical Languages and Classical Civilization. Although the materials make specific reference to courses in Latin, the activities contained therein are easily adaptable to courses in ancient Greek. In addition, activities designed for use at a specific level can easily be adapted for use at any other level. Teachers should feel free to adapt activities to their courses as they deem appropriate.
In order to assist students in locating and using information from the textbook most efficiently and successfully, it is helpful to familiarize students with the features of their textbook. Since Latin textbooks are designed with predictable features presented in recurring ways, it is helpful to students to familiarize themselves with these features prior to using the textbook extensively.

Purpose
- Familiarize students with the main features of the Latin textbook they will be using so that they can navigate through the text and locate essential information successfully.

Payoff

Students will:
- develop strategies for locating information and become familiar with the Latin textbook they are to use for their course.
- be able to locate the following: stories, running glossaries, words in the dictionary of the textbook, grammar notes and review sections, derivative activities, and Roman Life / cultural information.
- develop an understanding of the linguistic conventions used in their textbook (things such as where capital letters are used or not used, how the punctuation is used, etc.)

Tips and Resources
- Teachers should become familiar with the features of the specific Latin textbook they are using, noting the essential components their students will need to use.
- See the student resource: carpe librum! How To Use Your Latin Textbook Efficiently. Teachers should modify this resource according to the textbook they use.
- See, also, the Getting Ready to Read strategies in Think Literacy: Cross-Curricular Approaches, Grades 7 – 12.
- Teachers may prefer to do this activity orally.
- The skills supported by this activity should be reinforced regularly to ensure that students continue to understand the useful features of their textbook and how to access them independently.

Further Support
- Model the use of the textbook, referring to specific sections as questions arise in class and encourage the students to find the answers independently.
- Most textbooks also have Teachers’ Guides available as well as web-based support materials. In addition, the Ontario Classical Association (which maintains a web site at www.ontclassics.org) is a resource for mentor information and other useful materials.

Getting Ready to Read: Extending Vocabulary

LATIN Level 1 LVL AD (murus verborum: Creating a Latin Word Wall)

Students of Latin are required to understand specific terminology essential to their study (and to develop an understanding of linguistic structures common to all languages). A word wall, which contains specific grammatical terms taught throughout the course, will provide visual reinforcement for all students, particularly those who are visual learners, who have learning challenges, or who are ESL students.

Purpose
- Understand and reinforce, using a visual reference, the specific grammatical terminology essential to a study of Latin at this stage.
- Help students independently and accurately use grammatical understandings in completing class activities.

Payoff
Students will:
- use visual reinforcement to understand and apply grammatical concepts in class activities.
- develop improved accuracy in translations and other class activities.
- develop greater independence, accuracy and speed in reviewing, referencing, and applying grammatical concepts.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers should consistently reinforce previously-taught grammar, adding new concepts as they are learned and illustrating the connections between concepts for greater understanding.
- Teachers will also need to cover the information or take down the word wall prior to tests or quizzes.
- Teachers should use colours and visuals to enhance the word wall.
- Students can also be assigned to create posters of the grammatical concepts which can be posted in the classroom. A senior Latin class can use this activity to review grammatical concepts and provide the visuals for the use of the level one students.
- Teachers should organize the visuals to illustrate concepts relating to nouns in one group, verbs in another group, adverbs in another group, etc., leaving room to note the connections between concepts and within concepts.
- Teachers may also use this activity to teach vocabulary, derivatives, or cultural material.

Further Support
- Consult the Ontario Classical Association, Teachers’ Guides, and/or web sites for additional resources.

Getting Ready to Read: Extending Vocabulary

LATIN Level 1 LVL AD (murus verborum: Creating a Latin Word Wall)

Creating a Word Wall (e.g.):

NOMINATIVE CASE
- The subject of the verb.
- The person or thing doing the action.

e.g. (1st and 2nd declensions):
- ancilla
- servus
- templum

(3rd declension):
- mercator
- iudex
- canis
- leo

IMPERFECT TENSE
- This tense indicates that something happened over a period of time in the past.
- Usually translated as “was” or “were” + “ing”.

Endings pattern:
- bam, bas, bat, bamus, batis, bant

E.g.: edebam – I was eating
Students of Latin complete a variety of translations throughout the course, but it is also helpful to have them extract meaning through exercises which require them to scan a Latin story and identify the key events and characters.

Purpose
- Require students to exercise their understanding of vocabulary and grammar outside of translation activities.
- Encourage students to apply their knowledge to an unseen passage and extract general information about the story quickly.
- Illustrate students’ understanding of vocabulary and grammatical concepts, or indicate areas for improvement.

Payoff
Students will:
- understand the content of a story without translating it.
- self-diagnose issues with vocabulary and grammar independently.
- locate information in Latin efficiently.
- reinforce linguistic skills which they use in English and other languages and subjects.

Tips and Resources
- This activity can be applied to any story from a Latin textbook.
- It is a useful way of providing a variety of activities which appeal to different learning styles, and it requires students to apply their skills to alternative contexts.
- Students can be asked to skim a Latin story for basic meaning, and then the story can be corrected by the whole class. Alternately, students can skim for basic meaning and then switch with a partner who will then translate the story. The partner can then compare her or his translation to the skimmed meaning, and the partners can discuss what they have found, before correcting the stories as a whole class.
- This activity is also an excellent opportunity for peer tutors to interact with students and to test their own knowledge as they assist their peers.
- Teachers may use skimming and scanning activities orally, or in writing, individually or with groups, combining approaches as they deem appropriate.
- Also, students can scan for specific information as directed by the teacher.

LATIN  Level 1 LVL AD  (Identifying Key Events of a Latin Story)

Sample Story for Scanning and/or Skimming
“Caesar et leo”
(This story would be most appropriately used toward the end of the Level One course.)

senex in villa habitabat. in horto recumbebat et dormiebat. leo sub lecto se celavit et Caesar eum petivit. canis in lectum saluit et ululavit. leo fremuit. senex erat veterrimus et fessus et surdus. servi, postquam clamorem audiverunt, in hortum ruerunt. servi vocem leonis audiverunt, sed solum canem viderunt. servi non rem intellexerunt.

“babae! quid accidit? ubi est leo? solum parvum canem video. non intellego!” inquit unus servus. servus parvo cani appropinquavit. canis manum servi lambebat, et leo pedem servi lambebat. servi erat attonitus. circumspectavit, et sub lecto inspexit. postquam servus leonem vidit, leo iterum servum lambit. servus clamavit et ad tablinum fugit.

Caesar leonem spectavit et iterum latravit. leo per villam currebat et Caesar eum agitabat. servi et coquus et ancillae perterriti erant. ingentes clamores fecerunt et in viam fugerunt. interea, senex dormiebat.

ego villam intravi et canem quaerebam. senem dormientem inveni. eum excitavi et eum rogavi, “vidistine canem meum? est parvus sed ferox!”

LATIN Level 1 LVL AD (Identifying Key Events of a Latin Story)

Skimming Questions for the story, “Caesar et leo”
(Use these questions to prompt oral discussion after students have skimmed the story.)

#1. What characters do we meet in the first paragraph of the story?

#2. What happens in the first paragraph?

#3. Where do the characters go?

#4. What happens when the characters enter the garden?

#5. What confuses the slave? What is his reaction?

#6. What do the other members of the household do?

#7. How does Caesar save the city?

#8. How is Caesar rewarded?

#9. Is the story written in the present or past tense?

Scanning Questions for the story, “Caesar et leo”
(Use these questions to either ask orally or to provide in a handout as students scan the story for specific information.)

#1. Name 4 characters in the story.

#2. Name 4 actions in the story.

#3. Name 4 locations in the story.

#4. Find 4 examples of imperfect tense verbs.

#5. Find 5 examples of perfect tense verbs.

#6. Find 2 examples of superlative adjectives.

#7. Find 4 examples of dative case nouns.

#8. What is the gender of the narrator and how do you know this?
In the ancient world, the majority of individuals were unable to read and write, yet they developed means of communication with each other through images, means that are still useful resources for understanding today. These images are often the only way for modern Classicists to understand aspects of ancient culture in Greece and Rome and so they are still very valuable sources of information, particularly about those ancient people who were not members of the wealthiest class. This activity encourages students to find meaning through interpreting visual images (e.g., photographs of statues, pictures, paintings, architectural features) as an alternate source of information.

Purpose

- Familiarize students with images from the ancient world.
- Help students develop the skills to interpret these images independently for greater understanding of ancient cultures.

Payoff

Students will:

- interpret images from the ancient world and from the modern world based on them (e.g., photographs of graffiti, art, sculpture, replicas).
- enhance their skills in critical analysis and finding deeper, more complex meanings.
- apply this skill to interpreting images in other courses.

Tips and Resources

- This type of activity is particularly useful for students who are visual learners and for ESL students who can bring their own metacognition into use.
- In addition, this type of activity can be very useful to teachers in communicating concepts or ideas which are challenging to express in other ways.
- Teachers may find it useful to prepare a worksheet for students to complete during the activity.
- See teacher resource, Tips for Interpreting Images from the Ancient World.
- Some features of the images which would be helpful to consider include:
  - size
  - materials used to create the image
  - inscriptions
  - colour
  - what the images depict (iconography)

Further Support

- Visual images can be accessed through the Ontario Classical Association’s web site and through support materials offered with most textbooks.

(The following questions refer to the photograph on the facing page and to the letters which denote specific features.)

#1. Look at the picture as a whole: what do you think this is a picture of? Why?

Feature A:
#2. What is this feature?
#3. From what material do you think it was made?
#4. Why do you think it is on the outside of the building?
#5. What do you think it depicts? Why?

Look at Features B and C:
#6. What do you think these items are? Why?
#7. What can you deduce about item B – what does it tell you about the building material available at the time? Why are there depressions in the stone at the back? What does B tell you about technology and engineering at the time? Why?

Feature D:
#8. What do the steps at feature D suggest about what type of building this could have been?

Feature E:
#9. What do you think feature E was? Why?

Feature F:
#10. What does feature F suggest to you about the types of technology and building materials used in ancient Rome?
#11. What do you think that feature F reveals about taste and decoration popular in ancient Rome? Why?

Feature G:
#12. What do you think feature G is?
#13. How does it compare to its modern equivalent?

Features H and I:
#14. What do you think feature H might be? Why?
#15. What does feature I show?
#16. How do you think feature H and feature I are connected? Why?
The culture sections of courses in Latin deal with a variety of topics related to the ancient world. The information is in many cases abundant with facts, and, as a result, students require various strategies to help them sort ideas, make connections between the ancient and modern worlds, identify relationships among various elements of ancient culture, and synthesize large amounts of information in order to write coherent test answers, research papers, and create oral presentations.

Purpose
- Assist students in sorting and synthesizing information about various aspects of ancient life.
- Enhance students’ ability to deal with information independently when writing research papers, preparing notes, creating presentations, etc.

Payoff
Students will
- develop critical and creative-thinking skills.
- develop facility with skills required for processing information and coherently expressing it in written form.
- independently organize thoughts and ideas regarding topics discussed as part of course material or as independent research.
- synthesize prior knowledge and material learned in other classes with information being currently learned.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers may wish to model any number of webbing and mapping strategies which will assist students in expressing course material through writing.
- Teachers may also wish to have students read through Roman Life material, for example, as a class in order to add supplementary information or clarification and to ensure students are attentive to the content. This also allows students to contribute information from their own experiences or readings.
- See p. 108 in Think Literacy: Cross-Curricular Approaches, Grades 7 – 12.
- Sample Mind Map for ‘Roman Houses’. (See page 20)

Further Support
- Graphic organizers can be made visually appealing using computer programmes, such as "Inspiration".

Sample Mind Map for “Roman Houses”
Paired Work: Timed Retell
LATIN Level 1 LVL AD (Reading Latin Aloud)

In this activity, students work in pairs to enhance their facility with spoken Latin and with connecting to the written word. Students frequently experience difficulty pronouncing words in new languages and may not recognize the sounds of words they have only seen in print.

Purpose
- Reinforce students’ understanding of spoken Latin and enhance their ability to pronounce it themselves.
- Assist students in understanding the purpose of punctuation in written Latin and the conventions of oral reading.

Payoff
Students will:
- develop greater understanding of the conventions of spoken Latin (elements of pronunciation).
- develop greater facility with reading aloud in both Latin and English.
- understand the use of punctuation and capitalization in Latin and what this requires when read orally.
- understand the content of what they read orally and hear without directly translating.
- enhance their ability to focus and attend when listening to orally-presented information.
- experience greater facility in taking notes from orally-presented information.

Tips and Resources
- This activity is very helpful for students who are aural learners.
- It is also beneficial to help students focus on oral information and develop their listening skills.
- Teachers may find it necessary to demonstrate proper pronunciation and technique several times in modeling this activity for students.
- Teachers may find it useful to ask students to use a ruler or similar item to distinguish the Latin or ancient Greek text line by line as it is read aloud.
- Teachers may also find it useful to provide tapes of oral readings to students (particularly if students experience difficulties) so that they can practice.
- By having students practice reading aloud in pairs, the stress students may experience in reading before the whole class may be reduced, and teachers may find the activity more successful.
- In addition, teachers may wish to use language lab facilities available within their schools to create audio support materials or allow students to create tapes of their readings which they can then listen to and note areas for improvement.

Further Support
- Most textbooks also have available orally-presented materials (on audio CDs or on web sites) to accompany readings. These can be ordered.

Latin Pronunciation Guide:
- In Classical Latin, all letters are pronounced when spoken (there are no silent letters).
- Most consonants are pronounced in the same way as in English except:
  - “c” is always hard (pronounced like “k”), as in “came”
  - “g” is always hard, as in “game” or “good”
  - “v” is always pronounced like the English “w”, as in “walk”

Vowels can be pronounced as either a long vowel or short (these long and short sounds are slightly different from English). A long vowel is usually indicated by a small line called a macron which appears over top.

Jigsaw is an extremely useful method of reinforcing students' abilities to work cooperatively and to take responsibility and ownership of their work. It also permits students to learn both vocabulary and grammar more thoroughly, since it provides students with the opportunity to teach their peers. This type of activity is excellent for refining translation skills.

Students are divided into “home groups” which are further subdivided into “expert groups”. Each expert group is assigned a specific passage from a Latin story. Together, they translate the paragraph and ensure that they understand both the vocabulary and the grammatical content of the passage so that when they return to their home groups they can lead their peers through the translation of their section of the passage.

Purpose
- Encourage cooperative learning through group translation exercises.
- Encourage students to learn through greater self-direction and problem-solving approaches which support retention of information and skills.

Payoff
Students will:
- enhance their cooperative learning skills.
- practice their skills in translation and the application of grammatical concepts and vocabulary knowledge to new passages.
- improve their self-confidence through more independent learning opportunities.
- improve their communication skills by sharing information within group settings.

Tips and Resources
- Jigsaw activities can be very beneficial for aural learners and those students who find great success in social learning situations.
- This type of activity also provides variety in translation activities.
- In addition, this activity is an excellent way to provide students who might be hesitant to speak in front of the class with opportunities to speak and present within smaller groups.
- Teachers should organize expert groups to include students from a range of abilities so that the greatest support possible is provided within the group setting.
- They should arrange the passages and groups to match (e.g., for six groups, a passage with six sections is required).
- Teachers will also need to review with students strategies for interacting within groups (e.g., not dominating the group’s activity, providing supportive feedback, being considerate of others). See Think Literacy: Cross-Curricular Approaches Grades 7-12 pp. 159-160 and pp. 170-171.

LATIN Level 1 LVL AD (Jigsaw of a Latin Translation)

Student Self-Diagnostic Checklist

In participating in this activity, I had difficulty with the following elements of Latin:

☐ recalling noun endings;
☐ recognizing cases;
☐ recalling verb endings;
☐ recognizing verb tenses;
☐ remembering vocabulary;
☐ word order;
☐ recognizing and translating adjectives;
☐ recognizing and translating adverbs.

In participating in this activity, I:

☐ helped others to understand the material and skills;
☐ took personal responsibility for my contribution to the group’s work;
☐ listened to others as they made contributions;
☐ maintained my focus on the task;
☐ offered positive constructive feedback to others in my groups;
☐ gave my best efforts to problem solving and figuring out the translation on my own before asking for help;
☐ asked for assistance when I needed it;
☐ took thorough notes of the translation as directed by the teacher;
☐ listened carefully to the instructions provided by the teacher;
☐ participated in the follow-up discussion / completed the follow-up task.

What I enjoyed about this activity was (and why):

Expert Groups: Within these groups, students work together to arrive at an accurate translation. Each student in the expert group has the same section of one passage.
Engaging in Reading: Most/Least Important Ideas and Information

LATIN Level 2 LVL BU (rationes maximi momenti / minimi momenti)

Students frequently have difficulty identifying the key ideas of text in both English and Latin, and so opportunities to practice this skill with specific focus are very beneficial. In preparation / review for tests and exams in any subject, these skills are essential for students to grasp.

Purpose
- provide students with opportunities to practice skills in identifying most and least important information in texts written in Latin as well as Roman culture passages written in English.

Payoff
Students will:
- exercise and strengthen critical thinking skills in processing written information in Latin and English.
- improve their note-taking skills (speed, accuracy, completeness).
- develop greater fluency and accuracy in reading written materials in Latin and English.
- learn to support statements and opinions with essential information gathered from written sources.
- develop skills in using vocabulary and context to determine meaning.

Tips and Resources
- While extracting key ideas from written text can be very challenging, it is important to encourage students continually to practice these skills and to see that important information can be gleaned from Latin text without directly translating it.
- One of the greatest difficulties for students is the temptation to see one’s subjective interests as paramount. Students should be encouraged to select ideas and information after careful consideration and real thought.
- Teachers may wish to remind students to bring highlighters or coloured writing implements to class for this activity.
- Teachers may wish to focus on having students locate the most important ideas within a passage only. Teachers should feel free to adapt this activity to remove the instruction to locate the least important ideas as they feel appropriate.

Further Support
Teachers may wish to refer to Think Literacy: Cross-Curricular Approaches, Grades 7 - 12 p. 47 for a useful chart.

Central Focus of the Reading:
Generating Ideas: Adding Content (Pass it On!)

LATIN Level 2 LVL BU (Composition in Latin)

One of the most useful ways for students to understand the structure of Latin sentences is to create their own. Also, one of the ways to reinforce their understanding of written expression in English is to complete a writing activity in Latin. This causes them to really consider how to express ideas, how grammatical concepts function, what vocabulary they need, and how words work together in English and Latin.

Purpose
- Strengthen students’ understanding of Latin grammatical concepts and vocabulary by writing their own sentences in Latin.
- Reinforce students’ self-editing skills by considering what they have intended to express in written Latin and then evaluate whether their work has successfully done so.
- Enhance students’ abilities to critically analyze written text (both their own and that of their peers).

Payoff
Students will:
- understand Latin vocabulary and grammar.
- experience a better understanding of the precision of Latin written expression.
- better understand English written expression and how to communicate more precisely and carefully.
- improve their skills with critical analysis and problem solving.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers should begin slowly with this activity, requiring students to begin by composing simple sentences before asking them to complete more complex compositions or small paragraphs.
- Teachers may wish to have students complete pre-composition “warm-up” exercises in which students choose from selections of declined and conjugated words in order to write Latin versions of English sentences (see accompanying resources, Composition Practice (“Warm Up”) and Composition Practice).
- Teachers may wish to begin by parsing simple English sentences to have students practice identifying words and phrases according to their Latin grammatical designations.
- Teachers should encourage students to try to work through the process of composition independently, really focusing on the grammatical elements before asking for assistance.

Further Support
- Many textbooks offer online support through web sites as well as student work books which allow students to practice these skills.

Composition Practice (“Warm Up”)

Read each of the following English sentences carefully. Then, compose the corresponding Latin sentence by circling the correct words provided in the list below and write the complete Latin sentence on the line beneath. You need to be ready to explain your choices.

1. The mistress sent the hair-dressers from the room.

   dominam ornatricem ex horto demittebat
   domina ornatrices e cubiculo demisit

2. The cruel master yelled at Sempronia and the slave-girls.

   dominus crudelem Semproniae et ancillam clamabant maritus crudelis Semproniam ancillas clamavit

3. It is proper for a lady to live in the city of Rome.

   difficile erat matronae in urbis Roma vitare decorum est dominae ex urbe Romae habitare

4. It is difficult to buy an expensive and elegant house.

   difficule erat villas pretiosam et elegantem emere decorum est villam pretiosas elegantes vendere

5. Livia was luckier than lovely Sempronia.

   Liviam est fortunatior quam Sempronia pulchras
   Livia erat fortunatior amica pulchra
Composition Practice

Translate each of the following English sentences into Latin. Be sure to analyze the parts of speech in the sentences before you attempt to translate.

Many ships from many lands stand in the port of Ostia.

“We make beautiful things in my shop,” said Claudius.

“Did you (plural) see the riot which was in the street of the temples?” asked Marcellus.

These priests left the temple of Jupiter and walked through the streets of the city to that ship in the port.

“Tiberius, when I was returning home from the temple of Jupiter, I saw my shop burning and many people running in the street,” shouted the friend.

LATIN Level 2 LVL BU (Determining the Sequence of Events in a Latin Passage)

An effective way to check student comprehension of written Latin is to ask students to put in the proper sequence English translations of Latin sentences from a passage provided. Students are asked to read the Latin text and organize, in proper matching sequence, the English sentences.

Purpose
- Reinforce students’ ability to understand written Latin without direct translation.
- Reinforce their critical thinking ability and their skill in organizing ideas logically and sequentially.

Payoff
Students will:
- read and understand more quickly, enhancing fluency and speed of comprehension of a Latin text.
- improve their organizational skills.

Tips and Resources
- This activity is helpful for students who have difficulty in writing and for students who are visual learners (since it allows for visual manipulation of text).
- This activity can also be done in pairs or individually (or in small groups) – it is very adaptable to different learning situations.
- In addition, it can be carried out using paper strips for students to arrange, or using computer technology requiring students to cut and paste.
- It also helps improve students’ abilities to translate between Latin and English.
- See the story below, Caesar est fortis.

Further Support
- Most textbooks have teachers’ manuals which contain English translations of the stories. Teachers could copy these translations to cut into strips if necessary.
- Many textbooks also have CD-ROMS which contain both the Latin text and the English translations which teachers can use in creating these exercises.

 Caesar est fortis – Latin text ego et Caesar in via, quae erat in media urbe, stabamus. feminas et servos, qui cibum et vinum emebant, spectabamus. subito, ingens fur in via apparuit et senem petivit. eum vehementer pulsavit quod senex multam pecuniam portabat. senex ferociter exclamavit, et frustra cum fure pugnavit.

 fur ad parvum canem se vertit. canis bracchium furis iterum mordebat. fur cum dolore exclamabat. Caesar et fur magnum clamorem faciebat.

 turba civium qui clamorem audiverant in via convenit. parvum canem, furem tenentem, spectavit. turba canem incitabat et furem vituperabat. tandem fur e via effugit. omnes erant laetissimi et Caesarem laudaverunt. Caesaris cibum obtulerunt et caput canis mulcebant. Caesar erat contentus. ego et Caesar domum redivimus. ego cani praemium dedi quod canis erat optimus et senem servaverat!

Caesar est fortis – English Sentences

Match the English sentence with the Latin sentence it translates (writing the Latin sentence underneath). Then, place a number in the blank which indicates the order in which the sentence occurs in the Latin text.

1. The dog bit the thief’s arm again.

2. … who had heard the noise.

3. … which was in the middle of the city.

4. He saw a small dog holding a thief.

5. They were offering food to Caesar.

6. I recognized the old man.

7. … the old man fell to the ground, unconscious.

8. … because the old man was carrying much money.

9. I gave the dog a treat…

10. The old man was hard-of-hearing.
In this activity, students are asked to enhance their skills in comprehension and editing by reading a translation of a Latin story and locating ten deliberately-placed errors in vocabulary, grammar, or syntax.

Purpose
- Provide opportunity for students to exercise their critical thinking skills in processing an English translation of a story.
- Provide opportunity for students to carefully consider the precision of Latin expression and what is required to make an expression accurate.

Payoff
Students will:
- enhance their understanding of Latin grammatical structures and vocabulary.
- expand their understanding of the structure and precision of written Latin.
- enhance their editing ability and their improve the sophistication and precision of their writing and speaking in English.
- practice their skills in group work, consensus-building, and providing peer feedback.

Tips and Resources
- This activity is particularly useful as a review for students of specific points of grammar.
- Teachers should pair students carefully, either combining students of similar abilities, or purposefully pairing students of differing abilities.
- Teachers will need to review with students proper techniques for group work and the etiquette involved in providing feedback to peers.
- This activity can be done completely orally if the teacher would like (reading the English translation aloud with ten errors for students to spot).
- Teachers should see the accompanying story, Caesar est canis optimus!

Further Support
- Teachers may wish to consult the teachers’ manual for their text book to determine if any additional translations provided may be of use for this activity.

Caesar est canis optimus!
This Latin story features the further adventures of Caesar whose owner, Julia, a kind slave girl, accompanies him to the forum...

_olim ego et Caesar in foro ambulabamus. viros occupatos et multas feminas cum liberis vidimus. ubique, servi et populi qui e multis terris variis ad urbem pulchram nostram venerant, per vias ruebant. ubique, mercatores merces vendebant et feminae cum ancillis illas merces emebant._ magna turba urbem complebat.

ego et parvus canis, Caesar nomine, eramus in foro _ut domino cibum et vinum emeremus._ subito, clamores audivimus.

_venalicius ancillam pulchram in catenis ligatam in forum trahebat._ ancilla lacrimabat et exclamabat; spectatores orabat ut eam adiuvaret. _nemo ancillae tristi auxilium dedit._ venalicius eam vituperabat et deridebat.

Caesar clamores ancillae et venalicii audivit et latravit. Caesar ad ancillam cucurrit et manum ancillae lambebat. _ancilla quae non diutius lacrimabat_ caput canis mulcebat. Caesar erat contentus quod ancillam amabat.

_cum venalicius ancillam comprehenderet._ Caesar latravit et tunicam venalicii momordit. _venalicius canem vitaebant et eum pulsavit sed Caesar assidue vestamenta tenebat._ tandem venalicius, qui facile ambulare non poterat, ancillam relinquit. _ancilla e foro ruit._ Caesar eam vidit et ancillam petivit. _ancilla risit et parvum Caesarum mulcebat._

tandem ego ancillam canemque inveni. _exclamavi, “Caesar! veni huc!”_

_Caesar statim mihi parebat et quam celerrime ad me ruit._ ancilla quoque ad me cucurrit._ ancilla, timide circumspectans, susurravit, “hic parvus canis me servavit! est optimus canis ! cani maximas gratias ago!”

_ancilla familiam non habebat; ancilla villam non habebat._ ego ancillam domum invitavit._ cum Caesare e foro discessimus et ad villam domini recte petivimus._

_cum villam intraremus, Caesar atrium circumspectavit._ tum per villam currebat, quod dominum quaerebat. _tandem dominum, qui in horto sedebat, invenit._ Caesar latravit et dominum ad atrium duxit. _dominus attonitus inquit, “Iulia, quis est ancilla? ego te ad forum misi ut mihi cibum et vinum emeres! cur ancillam emisti?”_

ego respondi, “domine! ego ancillam non emi! Caesar ancillam tristem servavit quod venalicius scelestus eam vendere volebat! ancilla familiam villamque non habet.” _dominus noster, quod erat benignus, respondit, “ancilla! habita nobiscum! Caesar est optimus canis!”_

Read the Latin story and then compare it to this translation. There are ten errors in the translation. Locate these and correct them.

Once, Caesar and I were walking in the forum. We saw busy men and many women with their children. Everywhere, slaves and people who had come to our beautiful city from many different lands were running through the streets. Everywhere, merchants selling their wares were making noise; women and their slave girls were buying their merchandise. A huge crowd was filling the street.

My little dog and I were in the forum where we were buying food and wine. Suddenly, we heard shouts. A slave dealer was dragging a pretty slave girl, bound in chains, into the forum. The slave girl was crying and shouting. She was begging the spectators to help her. A man named Nemo gave her help. The slave dealer was cursing and laughing at her. Caesar heard the shouts of the slave girl and the slave dealer and barked. Caesar ran to the slave girl and licked the slave girl’s hand. The slave girl, who was crying harder now, was patting the dog’s head. Caesar was content because he liked the slave girl.

The slave girl was understood by the slave dealer; Caesar barked and bit the tunic of the slave dealer. The slave dealer was cursing the dog and punched him, but Caesar was tearing the bottom of his clothes. Finally, the slave dealer, who could not walk easily, let go of the slave girl.

The slave girl ran into the forum. Caesar saw the slave girl and ran after her. The slave girl smiled and patted little Caesar. Finally, I found Caesar and the slave girl. I shouted, “Come here, Caesar!” Caesar obeyed and rushed toward me. The slave girl also rushed toward me. The slave girl, looking around fearfully, whispered, “This little dog saved me! He is an excellent dog! Thank you very much, dog!”

The slave girl did not have a family. She did not have a home. Therefore, I invited her to our house. We left the forum with Caesar and fought our way to the house.

When we entered the house, Caesar looked around the atrium. Then he was running around the entire house because he was looking for our master. Finally, he found our master who was sitting in the garden. Caesar barked and led the master to the atrium. Our astonished master said, “Julia, who is this slave girl? You were sent to the forum to buy food and wine! Why did you buy a slave girl?”

I replied, “Master, I did not buy the slave girl! Caesar saved the sad slave girl because a wicked slave dealer wanted to sell her. The slave girl does not have a family or a home. "Our master, because he was kind, responded, “Slave girl, live with us! Caesar, you are a good dog!”
Getting Ready to Read: Finding Organizational Patterns

One of the most significant skills students need in translating Latin is the ability to use a Latin dictionary efficiently and effectively. While the use of a dictionary may seem to be a skill that students should already possess, a Latin dictionary provides specific information in a very unique way, and so students benefit from understanding how different words are expressed in Latin dictionaries.

This activity can be adapted for any level of Latin study and any text book (since many text books include a small, specialized dictionary). It has been developed to teach students the most essential basic requirements of using a standard Latin dictionary.

Purpose

- Familiarize students with the basic information contained in a Latin dictionary.
- Assist students in locating necessary word forms and stems.

Payoff

Students will:
- understand the structure of entries within standard Latin dictionaries.
- be able to locate word forms and stems within dictionaries.
- accurately identify the word meaning which matches that in their translation.

Tips and Resources

- Teachers will need to consider the type of dictionary provided by their text book and adjust the accompanying handout to correspond with the information most useful to their students.
- Teachers may wish to provide students with additional exercises to practice the skills of locating meaning within standard dictionaries.
- Teachers may wish to adjust the accompanying handout, How to Use a Latin Dictionary, to suit their specific needs.

How to Use a Latin Dictionary:

First, remember that Latin is an inflected language, so the endings of words you are looking for will be different from the forms in the dictionary. You need to look for the closest form of the word.

Ask yourself if the ending suggests that the word is a noun or a verb – this can help you narrow down your search. (You know your endings now, so this should be easier.)

Nouns:

- Nouns are listed in a very specific way:
  - e.g., copia –ae, f. (coopia, from cum / ops) abundance or plenty.

Finding the Noun STEM:

By removing the ending from the Genitive, you get the stem (if there is a stem change, it shows up for the Genitive and all other cases – the Nominative stays in whatever form the dictionary gives). In this case, the stem is copi.

By looking at the Nominative and Genitive forms of the word, you can easily see which declension the word fits into. This lets you identify what other endings are possible and whether the ending you have would work with this word. If the ending you have does not fit, you know you have the wrong word – keep looking!

- e.g., copia –ae, f.

In this case, because the Nominative singular form of the word ends in “a” and the Genitive singular form of the word ends in “ae”, we know that this is a First Declension noun. Therefore, all the endings this word can take will be First Declension. If the word you have in your translation ends in “ibus”, for example, you will know that this is not the correct word, since copia cannot end in “ibus”.

Adjectives:
Adjectives are also listed in a very specific way:

- e.g., 1st and 2nd declension adjectives (remember that adjectives are, in their positive form, either 1st and 2nd declension, OR 3rd declension, NOT BOTH):
  - copiosus –a –um (copia) adj., abundant

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Noun to which the adjective is related (if there is one)

Grammatical part of speech

- e.g., 3rd declension adjectives (remember that in the 3rd declension, Masculine words and Feminine words take exactly the same endings)
  - e.g., corporalis –e (corpus), relating to the body

<table>

Meaning of the word

By removing the ending, you can see what the stem is (in this case, corporal).

How To Use a Latin Dictionary, continued

Adverbs:
☞ Frequently, adverbs end in e (although there are some variations). Usually, the dictionary will list the adverb, and then direct you to the citation for the verb it is related to.
  o e.g., corrupte, adv. from corrumpo; q.v.
  o (So then you look at the reference for corrumpo and find that corrupte is listed as the adverbial form meaning “corruptly, incorrectly”)

Verbs:
☞ Remember that verbs will either be active or passive, indicative (regular) or deponent.
☞ e.g., corrumpo -rumpere –rupi –ruptum

 The dictionary may not give all 4 forms of the verb – it will likely only do this if there is an important stem change you need to be aware of (e.g., the stem for the perfect form of this word is corrup not corrump.)

 Remember to just watch your endings carefully. You know your endings and grammar – look for the most reasonable possibility for the word and remember that not only do the endings change, but sometimes the stem changes as well. Everything you need is here in your dictionary!

Latin poetry contains deeper meanings than students may first realize upon translation. As they progress in Latin courses, they need to “read between the lines” to make connections and build the critical thinking skills to see the more subtle content that ancient authors intended.

Purpose
- Understand literary devices common to literature in all languages (such as allusion, metaphor and simile).
- Connect a poem to cultural and historical material already studied.
- Provide students with opportunities to translate and process the writings of real Latin authors and to understand the context and expressions unique to them.

Payoff
Students will:
- apply skills in analyzing literary devices to literature in Latin (and in other languages).
- become more familiar with the terminology used in analyzing literature.
- become aware of the varied expressions, influences, and content which Latin authors have brought to their work and how their writings are a record not just of thought but of history and social life.
- become aware of the impact of context and social surroundings on an author as he or she writes.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers will need to model the skills involved in analyzing literary devices common to Latin literature.
- They may also wish to prepare a handout for students outlining the devices and offering examples from Latin.
- Students can also use web and book research to locate explanations and information about mythological, historical, and other allusions contained in ancient poetry and other writing.

Rhetorical Literary Devices

Alliteration: this is the repetition of first letter of a series of words.
- e.g., miratur molem Aeneas magalia quondam

Apostrophe: this is a form of expression directly addressing a person.
- e.g., luge te, O Veneres Cupidinesque!

Chiasmus: this is a balanced arrangement of words or phrases in the shape of a Greek “chi”
- e.g., spem vul ta simulat, premit altum corde dolorem

Ellipsis: this is a form of expression in which words are omitted for effect.
- e.g., dixit me inventum

Hendiadys: this is a form of expression in which two nouns express an adjective-noun phrase or idea.
- e.g., silvas salusque Dictaeos

Hyperbole: this device expresses exaggeration for strong effect.
- e.g., plenus sacculus est aranearum

Metaphor: this device makes a comparison without using comparative words such as “like” or “as”.
- e.g., Clodia est flamma amoris

Onomatopoeia: with this literary device, the word sounds like what it means.
- e.g., ululavit, mugavit, susurravit

Oxymoron: this device uses an obvious contradiction.
- e.g., odi et amo

Personification: this device gives human characteristics to a non-human thing.
- e.g., multam nequiquam alloquerer cinerem

Simile: this device makes a direct comparison using words such as “sic” or “sicut” or “velut” (like or as).
- e.g., velut ingentem formicae farris acervum reponunt

Zeugma: this device uses one word in two different senses in the same sentence or phrase.
- e.g., Aeneas tuit dolorem et patrem Troia

Students can demonstrate their knowledge of the content of a Latin passage by identifying the main ideas of a text they are reading and providing details to support their decision. This is particularly useful when the students are asked to write summaries of stories or summaries of the Roman Life material written in English and contained within a text book.

Purpose
- Distinguish the main ideas of Latin passages and discern important details.
- Improve students’ writing of coherent and well-structured paragraphs.

Payoff
Students will:
- write more efficiently, accurately, and with greater sophistication.
- demonstrate an understanding of the Latin passage without translating it directly.
- improve their critical thinking skills in analyzing a text for meaning and deciding key ideas.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers should choose a passage (or series of passages) which contains many details. This passage can be either poetry or prose.
- Teachers may also wish to provide a photocopy of the passage(s) to students so that they can highlight directly on the material as they make notes.
- Because this is a skill which requires practice, teachers should arrange to provide further opportunities to refine and practice this skill over time.
- It is suggested that teachers begin with group work (small groups) before asking students to complete this activity individually.
- If the main topic of the passage is not immediately identifiable, teachers may have to provide references to the main idea. It may be helpful to model this by providing the main idea and a series of points about the passage, so students can select from these before writing their paragraphs.
- Teachers should be careful not to assign too much time to this activity.

Further Support
- Often, text books are accompanied by teachers’ manuals that offer additional readings that can be used for this activity.

Analyze the passages below and using a highlighter, highlight important facts and details which support the idea, “Caesar is a hero”...

ego et Caesar in via ambulabamus. Caesar erat canis. subito, Caesar leonem spectavit! "eheu!" clamavi. "leo est in via. mihi non placet! Caesar leonem agitat! Caesar est parvus, sed leo est magnus!" Caesar latratet et huc illuc currebat. leo timebat in villa cucurrit.

senex in villa habitabat. in horto recumbet domniebat. leo sub lecto se celavit et Caesar eum petivit. canis in lectum saluit et ululavit. leo fremuit. senex erat veterinus et fessus et surdus. servi, postquam clamorem audierunt, in hortum ruerunt. servi vocem leonis audierunt, sed solum canem viderunt. servi non rem intelllexerunt.

"babae! quid accidit? ubi est leo? solemn parvum canem video, non intellego!" inquit unus servus. servus parvo cani approquinavit. canis manum servi lambetebat, et leo pedem servi lambetebat. servus erat attonitus. circumspectavit, et sub lecto inspexit. postquam servus leonem vidit, leo iterum servum lambetebat. servus clamavit et ad tablinum fugit.

Caesar leonem spectavit et iterum latravit. leo per villam currebat et Caesar eum agitavit. servi et coquus et ancillae perpeterni erant. ingentes clamores fecerunt et in viam fugerunt. interea, senex dormiebat.

ego villam intravi et canem quaerem. senem dormientem inveni. eum excitavi et eum rogavi, “vidistine canem meum? est parvus sed ferox!”

senex mihi respondit, “quid! quis es? cur in villa mea es? ego nihil audivi! abi, caudex! nesesse est mihi dormire!”

Caesar, postquam leonem ad amphitheatrum agitavit, ad villam revenit. servi et coquus et ancillae eum laudaverunt et cibum obtulerunt. Caesar erat laetissimus! Caesar invenit! eram laetissima!

postridie ego et Caesar in via, quaerat in media urbe, stabam. feminas et servos, qui cibum et vinum emebant, spectabamus. subito, ingens fur in via apparuit et senem petivit. eum vehementer pulsavit quod senex multam pecuniam portabat. senex ferociter clamavit, et frustra cum fur se vertit.

fur ad parvum canem se vertit. canis brachium furis iterum morbit. fur cum dolore clamavit et in viam fugerunt. Caesar et fur magnum clamorem faciebat.

turba civium qui clamorem audierunt in viam convenit. parvum canem, furum tenentem, spectavit. turba canem incitabat et furum vituperabat. tandem fur e via effugit. omnes erant laetissimi et Caesarum laudaverunt. Caesar cibum obtulerunt et caput canis mulcebant.

Caesar erat contentus. ego et Caesar domum redieramus. ego cani praemium dedi quod canis erat optimus et senem servaverat!

post multos dies ego et Caesar in foro ambulabamus. viros occupatos et multis feminas cum liberris vidimus. ubique, servi et populi qui e multis terris variis ad urbem pulchrum nostrum venerant, per vias ruerant. ubique, mercatores merces venderant et feminae cum ancillis illas merces emebant. magna turba urbem complebat.

ego et parvos canes, Caesar nomine, eramus in foro ut domino cibum et vinum emeremus. subito, canes audiverunt. venalicius ancillam pulchram in catenis ligatam in forum trahebat. ancilla lacrimabat et exclamabat; spectatores orabat ut eam feminae cum ancillis illas merces emebant.

Caesar claresco ancilae et venalicii audivit et latravit. Caesar ad ancillum cucurrit et manum ancilae lambetebat. ancilla quae non diutius lambetebat cum canis mulcebant. Caesar erat contentus quod ancillum amabat.

cum venalicius ancilla comprehendet, Caesar latratet et tunicam venalicii morbit. venalicius canem vituperabat et eum pulsavit sed Caesar assidue vestamenta tenebat. tandem venalicius, qui facile ambulare non poterat, ancillum relinquid.

ancilla e foro ruit. Caesar eam vidit et ancillum petivit. ancilla risit et parvum Caesarem mulcebat.

tandem ego ancillum canemque inveni. exclamavi, “Caesar! veni huc!”

Caesar statim mihi parebat et quam celerrime ad me ruit. ancilla quoque ad me cucurrit. ancilla, timide circumspectans, susurravit, “hic parvus canis me servavit! est optimus canis! cani maximas gratias ago!”

ancilla familiam non habebat; ancilla villam non habebat. ego ancillum domum invitavi. cum Caesarem e foro discissimus et ad villam domini recte petivimus.

cum villam intraremus, Caesar atrium circumspectavit. tum per villam currebat, quod dominumquaerabat. tandem dominum, qui in horto sedebat, inventit. Caesar latratet et dominum ad atrium duxit. dominus attonitus inquit, “Iulia, quis est ancilla? ego te ad forum misi ut mihi cibum et vinum emeres! cur ancillum emisti?”

ego respondi, “domine! ego ancillum non emi! Caesar ancillum tristem servavit quod venalicii sceptus eam vendere volebat! ancilla familiam villamque non habet.” dominus noster, quod erat benignus, respondit, “ancilla! habita nobiscum! Caesar est optimus canis!”

This activity is designed to measure student comprehension of grammatical topics in Latin. In five minutes, students will present orally to the class their understanding of a grammatical concept.

Purpose
- Consolidate and reinforce students' understanding of grammatical concepts.

Payoff
Students will:
- reinforce their knowledge of Latin grammar.
- develop their oral communication skills.
- share responsibility for their learning and that of their peers.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers should use this activity at the beginning of a class, or as a test or exam review, to reinforce understanding of grammatical concepts in Latin.
- Teachers should assign students to groups for this activity, exercising their judgment in creating the group structure. Teachers should also be aware that it is sometimes helpful to combine into groups students who are experiencing challenges with grammatical concepts along with those whose understanding is strong.
- This activity is particularly useful for students with special needs and those who are ESL and who would benefit from small group instruction.

Further Support
- Teachers may wish to consult the teachers’ guides and other textual supports for their text book in locating materials for grammatical instruction.
- The web site for the Ontario Classical Association lists a variety of web resources which may be useful for teachers in preparing this activity.

Small Group Discussion: Determining Key Ideas
LATIN Level 3 LVL CU (Determining the Key Ideas in a Latin Poem)

This is a brief activity which allows students to apply their analytical skills to a Latin poem, identifying key ideas expressed by the author.

Purpose
• Analyze Latin writing orally in group discussions by determining the key ideas of Latin poetry.

Payoff
Students will:
• develop critical analytical skills and creative thinking.
• develop confidence in expressing opinions in group situations.
• quickly and concisely grasp key ideas of Latin poetry.

Tips and Resources
• This activity can be done as a review after the basic translation of a poem.
• It could also be useful as a pre-translation activity, skimming a poem for basic meaning before the more detailed translation of it.
• Students could work individually or in groups to complete this activity, as determined by the teacher.
• Teachers will need to select a poem(s) as appropriate.
• Teachers may wish to ask students to bring highlighters and “stick-on notes” to use in this activity.
• Teachers may also wish to have students use a worksheet, such as the example provided below.

The skills involved in analyzing literary texts (translated into English) in a Classical Civilization Course can be applied by students to materials studied in many other courses. Ancient literary texts include such things as poems, stories, letters, biographies, and histories.

Purpose
- Allow students to gain a deeper understanding of ancient literature and its contexts by analyzing the work and drawing conclusions based on the analysis.
- Provide opportunities for students to learn strategies for approaching literary texts critically, as well as independently extracting meaning from poems.

Payoff
Students will:
- read ancient literature in English for content.
- learn to analyze literature for such issues as bias / propaganda, exaggeration, accuracy, completeness of detail, etc.
- consider the importance of corroborating evidence in assessing the validity of the writings of ancient authors.
- gain greater understanding of elements of the Classical world (e.g., social structure, gender issues, mythological expression and importance, political structure and influences) through the words of ancient writers themselves.
- apply skills in literary analysis to other subjects.

Tips and Resources
- One of the challenges for the teacher of Classical Civilization is that there is such an incredible variety of works of literature from the Greek and Roman world from which he or she must choose only a very small sample.
- Teachers may wish to create a graphic organizer to assist students in analyzing the texts selected.
- See Think Literacy: Cross-Curricular Approaches, Grades 7 – 12 p. #90 for tips in reading literary texts which teachers may wish to share with their students.
- See also the sample graphic organizer provided.

Developing and Organizing Ideas: Supporting the Main Idea

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATION LVV4U (Test and Exam Preparation and Writing)

In a Classical Civilization course, students are frequently required to select questions of a variety of types and to write coherent and detail-filled answers which demonstrate their comprehension of elements of the ancient world. This activity asks students to practice the skill of answering questions by selecting the most important ideas, supporting them with details studied throughout the course. These skills are essential for students to master, particularly in advance of continuing their education at the post-secondary level.

Purpose
- Assist students in expressing their understanding of elements of the Classical world by distinguishing between types of test and exam questions and the skills / approaches required to answer them effectively.
- Assist students in supporting their answers using specific details from the material studied in class and to recall supporting details from memory.

Payoff
Students will:
- gain experience in answering a variety of types of questions.
- learn to select central ideas and choose supporting details.
- enhance their studying skills.
- reinforce their test and exam writing skills for Classical Civilization and for other courses.
- write coherent, effective answers within a specified period of time.
- enhance their skills in preparing independently for tests and exams.
- improve their self-confidence in test and exam writing through thorough and focused preparation.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers should choose topics already studied in class that they are about to test or examine. (These topics should be significant to the course and reflect the specific and overall expectations required.)
- The material should contain details which lend themselves easily to both long and short answer questions and a variety of approaches.
- Teachers should provide a sample organizer and review sheet, communicating to students the topics to be studied and the strategies to review.
- Teachers may wish to use this activity as a practice for tests and exams, giving students a set period of time in which to complete the tasks.

Further Support
- Teachers may wish to consult the Guidance department at their schools for assistance and strategies useful for students who experience test anxiety or who need particular assistance with these skills.

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATION LVV4U (Test and Exam Preparation and Writing)

Suggestions for Writing Tests / Exams in Classical Civilization

★ Prepare thoroughly – focus on the test outline. You should focus particularly on the major topics on which we spent considerable time.

★ Focus on the key events and characters in your notes as well as how they relate to the topics.

★ Use graphic organizers, charts, and jot study notes to help you review. Also, it is recommended that you read your notes aloud. This helps you review the information aurally, orally, and visually while reading them.

★ It is a good idea to review over a period of time (not just the night before) – this helps information settle into longer term memory, and assists with recall.

★ Read the test over at the beginning of the writing period.

★ Highlight the instructions and make sure to follow them completely.

★ Answer the questions about which you feel most confident and about which you know the most.

★ Read the question carefully and thoroughly.

★ Answer the question as asked. Answer all parts of the question. Answer the question completely.

★ WATCH YOUR TIME: it is always very distressing when a student runs out of time. A suggested time limit is provided throughout the exam / test – make sure you watch the time and do not run out before you are finished.

★ Try to check over the exam / test before handing it in. Check to see that you have answered all necessary questions, and answered all parts of them.

★ Seek extra help if you feel you need it.

Sample / Practice Questions for Test/Exam Review of “The Trojan War”:

#1. Explain the roles of the gods and goddesses in the causes and progression of the Trojan War (select at least 3 deities and give specific references to the story in supporting your views).

#2. What is a “hero” (both the mythological definition and the modern one)? Which characters in the Trojan War are heroic or not heroic? (Select at least one from each side of the conflict.) Provide references to specific events in the story to support your views.

#3. In what ways are the female characters in the Trojan War both victims and agents of their fates? Discuss at least two female characters from each side of the conflict and provide references to specific episodes in supporting your statements.

Sample Organizational Chart / Mind Map:
Characters of the Trojan War

Greeks
- Agamemnon, King of Mycenae, husband of Clytemnestra
- Menelaus, King of Sparta, husband of Helen
- Odysseus, King of Ithaca, husband of Penelope, most clever Greek soldier, father of Telemachus
- Achilles, greatest Greek warrior, son of Peleus and Thetis, father of Neoptolemus
- Patroclus, Achilles' best friend

Trojans
- Priam, King of Troy, husband of Hecuba
- Hector, eldest prince of Troy, greatest Trojan warrior, husband of Andromache, father of Astyanax
- Paris, prince of Troy, “husband” of Helen
- Laocoon, Trojan priest and “seer”, killed by serpents...
- Cassandra, princess of Troy, “seer”, taken by Agamemnon
- Polyxena, princess of Troy, sacrificed over the grave of Achilles
Developing and Organizing Ideas: Adding Details

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATION LVV4U (Reviewing Elements of Myths by Adding Details to Stories)

In this activity students demonstrate their knowledge of the content of the Classical Civilization course by adding details which increase the depth and breadth of information provided in a written source.

Purpose

• Provide additional specific details about elements of Classical Civilization and encourage students to draw deeper meaning, and develop a more detailed understanding, of topics within the course.

Payoff

Students will:
• add depth and breadth to their written expression of material.
• learn to use their own resources and notes independently in expanding their understanding of course topics.
• make decisions evaluating the relevance and importance of information in creating summary notes.
• rely on external sources in processing information.

Tips and Resources

• Teachers should ensure that the basic written information provided to students deals with topics studied in class.
• Teachers should also ensure that the passage is not prohibitively rich in detail (so that students are not overwhelmed by information).
• Teachers should encourage students to use their own class notes to supplement the information provided as well as ancillary materials and prior knowledge.

Further Support

• Teachers may wish to consult the website of the Ontario Classical Association for internet materials on various aspects of the Classical world.
• The teacher-librarian may also be able to select appropriate materials on a Classical theme which teachers could use for this activity.

Small Group Discussion: Place Mat

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATION LVV4U (Oral Sharing – Discussion of Topics and Issues From Classical Civilization)

Frequently in a Classical Civilization course, the issues studied provide excellent topics for group discussion. In this activity, students are divided into groups of four and provided with a handout of a chart or supplied with a piece of chart paper. Students consider for two or three minutes a topic recently studied in Classical Civilization. Then each student writes down his or her observations on the corner of a “place mat” or chart. Following this, students view each other’s opinions and discuss their observations; this leads to rich small-group as well as full-class discussion.

Purpose
- Assist students in processing information studied in class both independently and cooperatively, and to practice their skills in orally presenting and defending / supporting their ideas and opinions.

Payoff
Students will:
- use prior knowledge as a basis for reflection on course content.
- interact with others to find personal meaning in material studied.
- appreciate and connect with elements of Classical civilizations and societies.
- consider other people’s points of view and use this to extend their own learning.
- take responsibility for their own learning.
- assist others in learning successfully.
- interact with course material independently of the teacher.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers could decide to use written topics for this activity, or they may find it interesting to use a visual image (a photograph of an ancient site or an image of a painting based on an ancient event) or a sample of music to stimulate student discussion on a particular Classical issue or event.
- Teachers could use this activity either to review topics already studied or as an introduction of a new topic.
- Teachers could also direct this activity to one issue on which all students comment, or several issues on which individual students or small groups comment.
- This activity is also a good ice-breaker for encouraging student cooperation early in the year.
- It is not necessary to provide more than 15 – 20 minutes for this activity.
- See the explanation and example of a Place Mat activity in Think Literacy: Cross-Curricular Approaches, Grades 7 – 12 p. 162-165.

Further Support
- Teachers may find it useful to consult online versions of Classical texts such as The Aeneid or The Odyssey to generate topics for class discussion.
- In addition, the Ontario Classical Association website offers a variety of resources which teachers may find helpful.

Small Group Discussions: Discussion Web

CLASSICAL CIVILIZATION LVV4U (Using Discussions to Analyze Elements of Classical Civilization)

In pairs, students begin by sharing their opinions / ideas on topics studied in Classical Civilization class. Then, they join another pair and share their thoughts together. Then, this group joins another (creating a group of 8). Each time groups combine, they note new ideas and opinions on a master sheet so that eventually there is one master sheet with all groups’ ideas. Students are required to consider not only opinions similar to theirs but also opposite points of view.

Purpose
- Provide students with opportunities to develop ideas about a topic studied in Classical Civilization and to think flexibly (seeing things from both sides).
- Develop arguments and proofs to support opinions related to the topic.

Payoff
Students will:
- develop their oral discussion skills.
- develop their critical thinking skills.
- apply their prior knowledge in order to create a list of positive and negative points.
- develop their argumentation skills.
- enhance their abilities to understand various points of view, even those which contradict their own.

Tips and Resources
- Teachers will need to select a series of debatable topics (ones which encourage debate and contradictory discussions) or readings currently being studied in Classical Civilization.
- Teachers may also prepare a graphic organizer to help focus discussion.
- This activity is also a great review for a test or exam, or as a pre-writing exercise for a debate or paper.
- This activity, in addition, is very beneficial for mixed-ability classes and supports skills needed in other classes, especially English and History.

<tr>
<td>✨Aeneas is the son of a mortal man and a goddess, so technically he is a “hero”.</td>
<td>✨A hero is someone who accomplishes great deeds in the face of terrible adversity – what Aeneas accomplishes he only does with the help of the gods.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>✨Aeneas is an accomplished fighter who defended Troy against the Greeks.</td>
<td>✨Aeneas really isn’t mentioned alongside great heroes like Hector.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>✨Aeneas saves his family from the burning city of Troy.</td>
<td>✨Aeneas lets his wife, Creusa, get killed on her way out of the city, and he doesn’t notice for some time that she is missing.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>✨Aeneas is destined to found a new Troy, a heroic feat.</td>
<td>✨Aeneas only accomplishes the founding of a new Troy because the gods intervene.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>✨Aeneas takes his people to safety in the city of Carthage.</td>
<td>✨Aeneas only gets to Carthage because Juno and Venus cause him to land there.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>✨Aeneas acts as a good leader while in Carthage, helping the city to progress in its building campaign.</td>
<td>✨Aeneas takes advantage of Dido, Queen of Carthage, misleads her into thinking he loves her, and then leaves her.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>✨Aeneas sacrifices his own happiness to leave Carthage and found a new Troy.</td>
<td>✨Aeneas only leaves Dido because he is told to by Jupiter – otherwise, a new Troy would never have been founded.</td>
